to the other members of this body has more in this emergency than you may at first be aware of. It was through the ficures of Washington that our first liberties were ob-tained more than through suything else. The sensions could not move him. The mighty hillows rolled, the storm raged, the lightnings flaslied, and the thunders resounded, but all in vsin; the immortal Washington bared his osom and bade them defiance. He knew there was but one kind of honor and virtue in the world, and that consisted a sacrificing every other consideration to the timents of our duty of right and of piety was this noble instinct which came to the d of his reason, which rallied blu in the day of combat, animated his lervent love of liberty, and fortified his manly heart against the siren songs of unboly ambition. Thus do we continue to emulate the name and charac-ter of the Father of our Common Country.

We have all seen how difficult it is for the best of men to stand firm when madness rules the hour. Our country is passing through a more fiery ordeal now, than in the days of Washington. It behaves no then to act like men, to stand firmly on the everlasting prinare received. The people should beware of those demagogues who tell them that they feel for them, but who would bu the last to feel with them, when the consequences of their own doctrine shall arrive. The trnth is, that no atrocity or aggression of the people will vitally effect the solul safety of our government until our rulers are intimidated to compromise that security by reserting to illegal modes of defending the laws or stitution; knowing this, that the moment any government naurps a power superior to the laws, it then naurps a power which, like tho convulsive strength of the madman, springs from disease, and will infallibly terminate in

The pusic discourse I during the parade was excellent. The brigade band, under the control and direction of the bandmaster, David H. Bowen, although very recently organized, is one of merit and talent. It numbers sevennees and appear soldierly-like. Lieut. Dowon is a composer of much ability, a splendid musician, and a gentleman both affabrea all pressure in the pressure in ing in manners.

SUPPOSED BUSHWHACKERS CAPTUIRD. On Sanday night last, Capt. Notin, with a detachment of twenty min, went down to Bor Coon Creek to capture some hushwhackers who were reported to have stolen eight negroes and murdered a soldier. They stocaled in arresting four men at the house of Clark Creek Cours will wast of this. HOREIDLE TRAGEDY—A RETURNED SOLDIER while the older was smaller. They made no resistance whatever. Two of them are rebel deserters, and all four fled from the conceription. They say they are now and always have been Union men. On being questioned as to carrying such inhuman-looking wenpons, the reply was made that they had them to protect themselves from the attacks of the rebel llome Gnards and Davidson's gnerilla cavalry, who are hinnting down all Union men like bloodhounds. The prisoners have been seat to Gen.
Slocnm's headquarters, where they will receive a speedy and jost examination.

BEATH OF A BRAYE YOUNG MAN.

DEATH OF A BRAVE YOUNG MAN. Some three weeks ago the hushwhackers surprised company B, 20th Connecticut, who were ou duty at Tracy City, Madison county, gnarding the coal mines which are being worked by the government. They dashed in npen them, shooting down the sentinel and wounding two men, among whom was Capt. Upson, commanding the company. He lin-gered in sickness for u short time and finally died. His remains passed through Cowen for MUSCLE VERSUS STRAM. In coming up from lluntsville on Monday last, our engine becoming detached from the cars at Larkinsville and while about swit hingen the properties the ponderous steam to the coweatcher they quickly brought the iron Lorse to a proper position. The method of relief in this emergency was a novel and successinl one.

SHAMEFUL TREATMENT OF A POLDIER. On Thursday last, Joseph Cole, a private in on cold floors, and receiving abuse from many of the petty tyrants to whose care he was narrosted, he reported himself at the Provost Marshal's office here Posterday from our jail, and stated his case. He has his descriptive met with him, sufficient evidence of the legality of his absence, and was on detailed duty y Gen. Thomas's and nlso Gov. Morton's orders. His other papers were at his home in New Albary, but those who kidnapped him would not allow him to procure them. This is not treatment for a soldier who has gerved such the months in his country's rervice, by man who, for the paltry sum of $20, disgrace their manhood. If white men—soldiers fighting for our homes and fires:dec-areto be thus heated down, why not tie the chain about cur necks and shackle as down at once?

THE SOTH ILLINOIS. I called upon what remains of the glocious 20th Itlineis the other one, at their camp, six mikes from here on the Hentsville road. Major Fline, in command, is a brave and worthy officer. This regiment took a brilliant part in the battle of Mission Ridge, where the fear-less Colocel O'Mara met his death. RUMORS AND EXCITEMINTS. For the past three days the troops along the cute from Bridgeport to this point and at untsville, I believe, have been held in readiontederate troops, was marching on Bridge-ort to destroy the stores, railroad, etc., and bet at the same time John Morgan, with 5,000 avairy, was to cross over at Capertou's Ferry, car by, and attack this point. Something of he kind must have been on foot, as our troops were under arms one or two nights. It is be-ieved that these are feints upon our lives, in-coded to divert our attenting from Knoxville while they are massing their forces there and at other important points.

THE LOOKS OF THINGS AT STEVENSON. Stevenson is improving rapidly. The streets and camps are cleared and swept daily. There are no dead horser and mules laying about as at Murfreesboro. The officer commanding this post has older and nentness largely developed, and though having those honors bes'owed upon him which would make many men consequential and dignified, he has not got above his haslness, and attends to all those minor matters so necesary for the health and com out of his command.

The White House is getting too small for them. They should all be turned out into the wilderness from which they came, as we reckon they will be on the sixth of November next, whon Uncls Sam, the master of the menageric, makes his quadrennial round. In the mean time, look out for wholesome truths, from lips and pens naused

Here we have Mr. Davis's position defined in his own words. He admits, virtually, that Powell was right and he was wrong; that Mr. Powell having failed to come to Mr. Davis, he has gooe to Mr. Powell, and both atanding now, side by side, upon an anti-war-peace-ipon-any-terma platform; both ars right in Mr. Davis's estimation.

By no means. The Gazette's construction not only does gross injustice to Mr. Davis but is totally unwarranted by his language as the Gazette quotes it. Mr. Davis's language rigorously excludes the Gazette's construction. The proposition as to which he intimates a doubt is not that coercion should be used now and henceforward until the rebellion is snypressed but that cocrcion should have been resorted to at the ontset. The latter proposition, as a practical question, is past beyond recall, and as to the former proposition Mr. Davis neither intimates nor feels a shadow of doubt. Un the contrary, he expressly says that he is still for cocrcion as he was at the outset. And indeed more than once during the present session of Congress he has declared this with the greatest posaible emphasis. We will cite a single that Senator's objection to the stopping of the war, Mr. Davis said:

But here is where the shoe pinches the Senator. His great paramount purpose is to carry on this war to the final destruction of slavery; to use all the war powers and all the other powers that the executive department can usure, or induce the people to acquiesce in their exercising, to the annihilation of alavery, per fas aut nefics.

The Senator is silent. His heart answera that question.

This is the position of Mr. Davis as contrasted with Senator Wilson's position. And such is the position of the conservatives of the country as contrasted with the position of the dominant party. The extract we have here given presents a bird's-cye view of the relative positions of the

At his lateresidence on Boaver Creek, near Clusgow, Kv., on the 2d day of February, 1864, Mr. Hanviy 8, Mynus, of broncho-gneumonla, in the 53d year of h.a.

The following account of this important expedition, it is hoped, may not prove uninteresting to the public. Soon after our return to Nashville from a reconnoitring expedition up the Cumberland as far as Creelsboro, Ky., during which we were fired upon several times by guerillas, we were undor orders again to depart for South-Ford, or Brinside's Point, 300 miles by way of the river. Having success, after marching uninterrupted by the Point, 300 miles by way of the river. Having taken on board a good sailing Captain, in the person of Mr. J. L. Bateman, and also a new communder, Lieut. Georgo Armstrong, of the 30th Indiana battery, the crew of the Silver Lake were once more buoyant with the hope of "better times coming." We left Nashville carly on the morning of January 7th, in charge of four transports, and arrived safely at Carthage on the evening of the 10th. The low stage of the water at that time precluded any further advance, and we were compelled to lay over for the space of twenty days. At length certain signs began to sppear in the heavens, and some few gracious drops were distilled from the overhauging clouds, which acted like spirits thrown upon the small emacted like spirits thrown upon the small embers of hope that still flickered in our bosons, lighting up each eye with a fire all its own, and wreathing each war-worn phiz with a grin very pleasant to behold. Meantime some addition had been made to the fleet in the shape of three gunboats and seven more transports, which gave an air of importance and respectability to the expedition, exciting uota few surmises among the natives along the bauks of the little creek, familiarly called the Cumberland. Brigadier-General Payne about this time appeared in Carthage, with a section of artillery and some carely with a about this time appeared in Cartuage, with a section of artillery and some cavalry, with the avowed purpose of going up the river on a scont, and, needing the assistance of a gunation and transport to accompany his forces, and transport to accompany his forces, and transport to accompany his forces, and the wounded is Lieu'enant Capron, whilst charging the boat and transport to accompany his forces, he applied to the commanding officer, Cnpt. We left Carthage on the afternoon of the 30th January, bidding adieu for the time to the balunce of the fleet. The forces (cavalry) sent along up the south discovery of petroleum at Albion, and our articles upon the other oil springs of the State, Landing, a notorious rendezvous for guerillas. The forces (cavalry) sent along up the south bank of the river by Gen. Payne, reported to him at this point, bringing in a rebel quarter-master on horseback, besides reporting forty prisoners taken and several killed, without sustaining any loss. Gen. Payne and staff disembarked and proceeded to scour the whole country as far up as Gainsboro, destroying several ferryboats and canoes, expecting an attack at any moment; but in this we were disappointed, as the rebs, for once, had enough to attend to at home.

Gen. Payne, on taking his departure for Carthnage on the Sullivan, left orders for us to proceed on up the river. In obedience thereto we left the upper Gainsboro landing early on the morning of February 3d, in pretty good trim forether a fight or a foot race. Not Considerable speculation is ricas to the cause of the sudden bursting out of this good trim for either a fight or a foot race. Not a shade of fear passed over the war worn features of the veteraus of the Lake as they silently gnthered around their guns, in obe-dience to orders from their commanding officer, oleaginous substance. It is thought by some that the intense co'd of the preceding few and nerved themselves for the contest. They had been there before! Some of them even on the bloody fields of Shiloh, Perryvillo, and Stone's river, and cared but little now prevented the absorption of the old by the carth, and that the subsequent thaw released about the whizing of a few stray bullets.

While passing a high bluff, some distance above Gainsboro, we received the concentrated fire of at least a hundred guns (small arms), literally riddling the cabin of the Lake, several of the balls passing through the upper and lower decks.

Owing to the perpendicularity of the bluff, some moments clapsed before we could got the range of them, save with small arms, during which the shot rattled around us like hail. Soon, however, it came our turn, when we opened ou them with our six and twelvefew rounds of hissing, screeching, death-dealing shells exploding on the top of the bluff made it necessary for Messrs. Meantime the river had commenced rising, but ere the curtains of night were drawn over tho tall bluffs, the heavy, rumbling sound of artillery in the distance warned us of the approach of the fleet, and also of the fact that the gunbouts were engaged. Ou they earne, "nearer and more near," until we could distinctly see the exploding shells falling on the tops of the bluffs, somewhat like meteors from the skies, lighting up the heavens for some distance around. They had run the blockade; all had been fired apon—some of them riddled with balls-but fortunately no one was hurt. Last, but not teast, came the guubnats Reinileer, Victor, and the little Newsboy, defiant as ever. Capt. H. A. Glafford, of the Reindeer, running alongside quietly, was enjoined upon to "come along," which order was promptly obeyed. But little fear of being fired upon again was entertained, as we had passed the "inferted" region including Jackson courts. Several of the transports, being heavily laden, passed with difficulty Wild Goose Shonls, but came to a respectful halt at Wolf Creek Shoals, together with the gunboats Reindeer and Victor, forty miles below South Fork. In obedieuce to orders, the Lake, after taking on some lading, in company with transports Colossus and Sullivan, proceeded on up, passing with much difficulty numerous shoals, and arrived at Big Soath Fork on the afternoon of February 8.

The appearance of this portion of the fleet was welcomed by the garrison with cheer after cheer, and other demonstrations of joy.
